History of Water Polo

Water polo was one of the first team events at the modern Olympic Games, being introduced in Paris in 1900. The game was created by the London Swimming Club in 1870 and soon found support in Europe. The concept was to develop a "football-like game in water" - a sporting comparison, which still remains relevant today.

Given the degree of difficulty of their game, water polo players are considered among the best conditioned athletes in the sporting arena. Ideally, players are tall with a long reach. Many players start their career as competitive swimmers.

Water Polo Today

The founding of the international swimming federation in 1908 was a pragmatic response to the increase in international sporting events crowned by the Olympic Games. At the first modern Olympics in 1896, three swimming contests were held. However, no universally-accepted rules, regulations or definitions governed the swimming events.

The Olympic Games competitions prior to FINA had included a variety of unusual events such as underwater swimming (1900), 200m obstacle swimming (1900), plunge for distance (1904) and springboard diving 4m, 8m, 12m (1906). Prior to the London Olympics, where a 100m pool was used, the ocean (1896 and 1906), the River Seine (1900), and a little lake in St. Louis, USA (1904), had been used as Olympic sites.

In order to unify the rules and create a forum for international meetings, the leaders of the eight attending countries (Germany, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Great Britain, Hungary and Sweden) met on 19 July, 1908, at the Manchester Hotel, London, on the occasion of the Games of the IV Olympiad, and resolved to form a world-wide swimming association.

Priority decisions or goals were clear: to standardise the rules for swimming, diving and water polo; to obtain control of world records and to maintain an up-to-date list of these records; and finally, to ensure the direction of Olympic Games competitions for swimming, diving and water polo.

Water Polo at the Olympic Games

The first Olympic water polo gold medal was won by Great Britain in Paris in 1900. European countries such as Hungary have since dominated this sport at the international level. Between 1932 and 1956, Hungary won five of the seven Olympic gold medals awarded. The USA is the only non-European team to have won gold.

Women's water polo will make its Olympic Games debut in Sydney in 2000. The International Olympic Committee agreed to include the women's competition in 1997. This should prove a great boost to the profile of water polo as it celebrates a century of Olympic Games involvement.

Historique du water-polo

Le water-polo a été l'un des premiers sports d'équipe inscrits au programme des Jeux Olympiques, puisqu'il y figurait dès 1900. Le water-polo, créé par le Club de natation de Londres, a vu le jour en 1870 et a vite trouvé son public en Europe. L'idée était de développer un genre de « football dans l'eau » - une comparaison qui se justifie encore de nos jours.

Compte tenu du degré de difficulté de ce sport, les joueurs de water-polo sont considérés comme les athlètes avec les meilleures dispositions physiques. De façon idéale, les joueurs sont grands avec une large extension. De nombreux joueurs commencent leur carrière en tant que nageurs de compétition.

Le water-polo de nos jours

La création de la Fédération Internationale de Natation en 1908 répondit à l'augmentation des compétitions internationales de ce sport, dont le fleuron étaient les Jeux Olympiques. Lors des premiers Jeux Olympiques modernes en 1896, trois compétitions de natation eurent lieu. Cependant, aucun règlement, règle ou définition reconnu au niveau international ne régissait les épreuves de natation.

Avant la création de la FINA, les compétitions olympiques avaient comporté une grande variété d'épreuves inhabituelles, telles que la nage sous l'eau (1900), la course d'obstacles de 200 m (1900), le plongeon de distance (1904) et le tremplin 4 m, 8 m et 12 m (1906). Avant les Jeux Olympiques de Londres, où une piscine de 100 m était utilisée, la mer, (1896 et 1906), la Seine (1900) et un petit lac à St. Louis, Etats-Unis d'Amérique (1904), furent utilisés comme sites olympiques.

Afin d'harmoniser les règles et de créer un forum pour les rencontres internationales, les chefs de gouvernement des huit pays participants (l'Allemagne, la Belgique, le Danemark, la Finlande, la France, la Grande-Bretagne, la Hongrie et la Suède) se rencontrèrent le 19 juillet 1908 au Manchester Hotel, à Londres, à l'occasion des Jeux de la IV^e Olympiade et décidèrent de créer une association de natation à l'échelle mondiale.

Les décisions et objectifs principaux étaient clairs : harmoniser les règlements de natation, de plongeon et de water-polo ; centraliser les informations sur les records du monde et les tenir à jour ; et pour finir, diriger les compétitions olympiques de natation, de plongeon et de water-polo.

Le water-polo aux Jeux Olympiques

La première médaille d'or olympique de water-polo fut remportée par la Grande-Bretagne à Paris en 1900. Des pays européens tels que la Hongrie ont depuis lors dominé ce sport au niveau international. Entre 1932 et 1956, la Hongrie a gagné cinq des sept médailles d'or olympiques. Les Etats-Unis d'Amérique sont le seul pays non-européen à avoir remporté l'or. Le water-polo féminin a fait ses débuts olympiques aux Jeux de Sydney en 2000. Le Comité International Olympique a approuvé l'introduction des femmes dans la compétition en 1997. Cela a donné un deuxième souffle au water-polo, alors que celui-ci célèbre un siècle de participation aux Jeux Olympiques.

FORMAT DES COMPETITIONS

Hommes

- Eliminatoires - 1 à 3 sessions par jour (matin, après-midi, soirée) ; 1 à 4 matches par session.
- Les équipes seront réparties en deux poules, A et B, de six équipes chacune. Les éliminatoires suivront le principe de tournoi par poules : chaque équipe affrontera toutes les autres équipes de sa poule.

- Les matches seront divisés en quart-temps de 7 minutes séparés de pauses de deux minutes. Si, à la fin du temps réglementaire lors d'un match exigeant un vainqueur, les deux équipes sont à égalité, le jeu sera alors prolongé, après une pause réglementaire de 5 minutes. Si les équipes sont toujours à égalité à l'issue des deux premières périodes de prolongation, les joueuses feront une pause d'une minute avant de jouer une troisième période qui se terminera au premier but marqué.
